THIRTEEN FOREST RESERVES

MORE THAN 21,000,000 ACRES OF TIMBER LAND SET ASIDE.

Exempted From Entry Under Any of the Land Laws-Uncle Sam's Forest Reserves Now Comprise 49,000,000 Acres.

Washington, Feb. 22.-President Cleveland celebrated the 165th anniversary of the birth of George Washington by Issuing thirteen executive orders far reaching in their effect. On the recommendation of Secretary Francis and a forestry commission of the National Academy of Sciences (appointed by Professor Wolcott Gibbs.the president of the academy) the president signed and promulgated thirteen proclamations establishing as many additional forestry reservations containing an aggregate area of 21,379,400 acres, two-fifths the area of the state of Kansas, Secretary Francis report to the president on the subject shows that the commission visited most or all of the forest reservations and other pub-lic forests of the United States, devoting three months of hard travel and careful study, without compensation, to the work assigned them. The amount of land in each reservation already entered under the general land laws is, the secretary points out, insignificant, and the portions of the area described are exempted from the proclamations. Some of the sections ar within th limits of railroad grants, and in such cases an executive proclamation only re-serves the alternate sections. "This is notably the case in the Priest River forest reservation, which the report of the commison characterizes as 'the most valuable body of timber in the interior of the conti-

The secretary will submit to congress the secretary win submit to congress a bill authorizing the secretary of the in-terior to indemnify the beneficiaries in any of these railroad land grants included with-in the limits of forest reservations estab-lished by proclamation of the president, by patenting to them an equal quantity of other portiors of the public domain within spec-ified limits.

The secretary further shows that under The secretary further shows that under the law authorizing the president to establish these reservations sixteen such reservations have heretofore been set uside, aggregating an area of 17,590,000 acres.

The thriteen proclamations are similar in terms, except those portions giving a description of the lands affected by each. After a description of the lands set aside the proclamations except from their force and effect all lands which may have been prior to the date hereof, embraced in any legal entry, and covered by any lawful filing duly of record in the proper United States land office, or upon which any valid settlement has been made pursuant to law, and the statutory period within which to make entry or filing of record has not expired; and all mining claims duly located and held according to the laws of the United States and rules and regulations not in conflict therewith:

Provided, that this exception shall not continue to apply to any particular tract of land unless the entry man, settler or claimant continues to comply with the law under which the entry, filing, settlement or location was made.

The location and area of the reservations under which the entry, filing, settlement or location was made.

The location and area of the reservations are as follows:

No. 1—The Black hills reserve embraces the central portion of the Black hills of South Dakotia and has an estimated area of $67,620 acres.

No. 2—The Big Horn reserve is situated in Northern Central Wyoming and embraces both slopes of the Big Horn mountain. Its area is 1,129,050 acres.

No. 3—The Teton reserve lies adjacent to the Yellowstone National park timber land reserve, being south thereon, and contains $29,440 acres.

No. 4—The Flathead reserve embraces both slopes of the main Rocky mountain range or continental divide, in Northern Montana, and contains an estimated area of 1,32,400 acres.

No. 5—The Lewis and Clarke forest reservation embraces both slopes of the continental divide in Montana and has an

No. 5—The Lewis and Charke forest reservation embraces both slopes of the continental divide in Montana and has an estimated area of 2,425,680 acres.

No. 6—The Priest river forest reserve occupies the basin of Priest lake and Priest river in the extreme northern part of Idaho and contains a total of 545,120 acres. In this reservation the Western white pine grows to a largest size. o a largest size.

No. 7—The Bitter Root forest reserve lies on both sides of the boundary between Montana and Idaho, and its area is 4,147,200 acres.

No. 8—The Washington forest reserve is locted in the state of Washington and contains an estimated area of 2,546,247 acres.
No. 9—The Olympic forest reserve occupies the high and broken Olympic mountain region in Northwestern Washington and contains an estimated area of 2,188,800 acres. This proposed reserve no doubt con-acres. This proposed reserve no doubt con-tains for its area the largest and most valuable body of timber belonging to the No. 10—The Mount Ranier forest reserve extends along the two slopes of the Cas-cade mountains nearly to the Columbia river, and contains 2.234.890 acres. No. 11—The Stanislaus forest reserve ex-

No. 11—The Stanislaus forest reserve extends north along the slopes of the Sierra Nevada mountains in California and embraces an area of 891,290 acres.

No. 12—The San Jucinto forest reserve embraces the San Jucinto mountains in Southern California. Its estimated area is 731,290 acres.

No. 13—The Uintah forest reserve embraces both slopes of the eastern part of the Uintah mountain range in Northern Utah.

oraces both slopes of the eastern part of the Ulitah mountain range in Northern Utah.

The report of the commission concludes with the statement that it fully recognized the fact that the forest reserve established and proposed cannot be maintained unless a plan can be adopted under which their boundaries can be modified so as to take from them all lands better suited for agriculture than for the production of forests, and under which their timber can be made available for domestic and commercial purposes, and valuable minerals can be freely sought for and mined within their boundaries. The commission is now engaged in perfecting a scheme of forest management which it believes will make the administration of the reserves possible. Sceretary Francis says: "The deep and growing interest in the preservation of our forests will make the act of President Cicveland very popular with all except those who have selfish designs on the forests. The timber growth in most, or many, of the older states has been ruthlessly laid waste; in some sections the settlers are realizing its scarcity, its cost for domestic uses growing greater from year to year. "Furthermore, these forests are the great reservoirs of the country; they preserve the snows, which, when protected, furnish a good and opportune supply of water to the streams, but if exposed to the sun, form destructive floods and inflict irreparable damage, to be followed by unbroken dereuths.

"This forestry commission, which has ## beginning to end. I am surprised that the Journal should make such a statement. I wish you to denounce it as emphatically as possible." FOR A NON-PARTISAN TARIFF. National Business League Addresses a Letter to the Ways and Means Committee. Washington, Feb. 22.-Mr. John W. Ela attorney of the National Business League, by direction of Messrs. Ferdinand W. Peck, Moses P. Handy, C. A. Gilbert and Elbridge G. Keith, members of the executive committee of the league, to-day presented a statement to Chairman Dingley, of the ways and means committee, of which the ways and means committee, of which the following is a part:

"Gentlemen:—The National Business League is composed of business men of differing partisan relations and varying shades of political opinion throughout the United States, auxiliary councils having been, and being, rapidly formed in the varicus states of the Union. The members of this national league believed that there should be thorough investigation into all matters concerning which legislation atmatters concerning which legislation af-fecting business interests is proposed, and desire that such legislation shall be prompt shall be along business rather than political lines, shall foster general rather than special interests.
"Members of your committee, having very special interests.

"Members of your committee, having very courteously expressed their willingness to receive and consider any statements we may present to the committee, we now take occasion to express to you the desire of this league—which we believe is also the desire of a large majority of the business men of the country—that the present revision of the tariff upon which you are engaged shall be a conservative one. While we understand that it is your intention by this revision to obtain more revenue and to protect American labor, we ask that its benefits and its burdens be spread as nearly equal as possible, and so as 'to foster general rather than special interests.' We believe that the country has now had sufficient experience with tariffs as to furnish a basis upon which the revisions may be made more scientifically than heretofore, and that the objects desired—whether revenue or protection—may be secured, and at the same time general business prosperity forwarded. We understand that your committee is endeavoring to work along these lines, and we tender you any assistance in that direction which you may desire from us.

"We also take this opportunity to say

"We also take this opportunity to say "We also take this opportunity to say that the league, being in favor of taking the tariff out of politics; favors the establishment of a new department of the government, to be designated the 'Department of Commerce and Industry' (the scope of which we will not discuss here), and of a tariff bureau in that department which—after the present revision—shall investigate and report on all contemplated changes in the turiff before action by congress. And we believe that this bureau should be composed of non-partisan experts, of such character and repute that their report on each schedule or subject their report on each schedule or subject investigated by them will be conclusive as to the facts and influential in the decision. In such case there would be few occasions for general revision of the tariff, with accompanying periodical upsetting of the business of the courter for search the former of the control of the search the control of the con iness of the country for months before and afterward, and the tariff would gradually become a matter of economic science."

THE NEW TARIFF BILL.

Chairman Dingley Will Not Be Able to Report It Until the Extra Session.

Washington, Feb. 22.-Chairman Dingley, of the ways and means committee, will not be able to report to the house the new tariff bill, which will probably bear his name, before the beginning of the extra session of congress, to be called for the lith of March. There would be little to be gained by reporting the bill to the house in this session, even if it were possible, because it would have to be reintroduced in the Fifty-fifth congress.

The next few days have been spent by duced in the Fifty-fifth congress.

The past few days have been spent by the tariffmakers principally in shaping the language of those schedules of the bill in which they have agreed on the rates. Several of the most important features of the bill are yet practically unconsidered. These include the wool, cotton and sugar schedules and the free list. The first of these promises to give the most trouble because of the failure of the wool growers and manufacturers to reach any agreement on rates. In order to complete the bill, the Republican members of the ways and means committee will stay in Washington after congress adjourns and devote their time to the works. It is expected that as soon as the extra session meets. Speaker soon as the extra session meets. Speaker Reed, who will undoubtedly be re-elected, will appoint the same members to the ways and means committee who are now serving, and the bill will be reported to the house.

GROVER'S ORDER WON'T STAND. It Is Said That McKinley Will Revoke the Sweeping Civil Service Proclamation.

Chicago, Feb. 22.-The News' Washington special says:
"It will be good news to the officescekers that President McKinley is likely to sus-pend or revoke the sweeping civil service pend or revoke the sweeping civil service order of President Cleveland, whereby nearly all the offices in the executive branch of the government are taken into the civil service list. General Grosvenor, of Ohlo, who is one of McKinley's closest friends, and who has been one of his stanchist and most capable political supporters, said: 'I believe that President McKinley will revoke or suspend the sweeping order which took all offices into the civil service classification. I have been investigating the matter thoroughly, and one of the ablest lawyers in this country has given me an opinion covering the case. He says that an executive can revoke his own deeds, just as a legislative body can reconsider an act. It is not probable that Cleveland will change his mind on the civil service order, but it is within his power to revoke his own act. His successor will not be bound by Cleveland's action. McKinley will be president and will administer the executive branch of the government in his own way. He can revoke that odious order, and I believe he will do so." order of President Cleveland, whereby
